APPENDIX A

Systematic review burnout inventory

The Samuel J. Wood Library at Weill Cornell Medicine is conducting a study about burnout among medical and health sciences information professionals who support systematic review research. We invite you to participate in a brief survey about your level of personal, professional, and client-related burnout in supporting systematic review research. We are requesting participation from all information workers, regardless of your level or type of involvement in supporting systematic reviews. This survey should take less than ten minutes of your time. The questions will be at a general level and will not ask for protected or any identifying information. By participating, you will help us assess the level of burnout and identify themes among information professionals’ systematic review work. Participating in this study is voluntary, and participants will remain completely anonymous. Even if you decide to participate now, you may change your mind and stop at any time. You may choose not to answer any survey question for any reason. This survey and research study have been declared exempt by the Weill Cornell Medicine Institutional Review Board (protocol #1807019460).

The survey will be open until Monday, October 1, 2018.
